

Landmarks OF NANTUCKET!

Merrill McCluskey

I have learned many things about photography in this program. I have learned that angle is very important, and making sure that you have a subject in a photo. As I was taking more and more pictures, I learned from my mistakes, and corrected them in my future photographs.

I have lived on Nantucket all of my life, and I have gotten used to having all of the island's historic landmarks around.

It would be horrible to see any of them go and it would be very, very sad. Along with being a native, I also am part of the swim team, and participate in school sports such as softball and field hockey. It has been really fun working on this project to help preserve Nantucket's past, for its future.

A SUNNY DAY IN TOWN WITH THE COBBLESTONES

In this photograph of the cobblestones on Main Street, it shows how interesting they really are. You can see the blues and the grays mixed in with some browns of the cobblestones. Having so many of these historic landmarks around always keeps us thinking of the people of the past.

GOING UP THE BEAM ON THE OLD MILL

As you can see in this photograph, the chipping red paint on the beam gives you an idea of how old the mill is. If this Nantucket landmark washed away from Nantucket history, it would be like getting rid of generations of past islanders

RED AND WHITE SANKATY LIGHTHOUSE WITH BLUE SKIES

This old landmark has been keeping Nantucket boats safe since 1850. In this photograph, the lighthouse is very tall and beautiful, contrasting with Nantucket's light blue skies.

FOUNTAIN ON MAIN STREET

This photograph gives you an idea of how colorful the fountain on Main Street can be. If the fountain disappeared, it would be very empty in the spot where it used to be. People don't usually recognize the Old Fountain, but if it was gone, there would be a big hole in Nantucket's history.
