

Landmarks OF NANTUCKET!

Casey Lendway

My name is Casey Emilia Lendway. I am twelve years old. I was born on Nantucket, and have lived here all my life. I love taking pictures of all sorts of things. I try to have my pictures make people think about more than just the subject of the picture. I think pictures at fun angles and with a lot of emotion are fun to take. When I take pictures, I try thinking about not only the subject but also how it makes me feel and how I want it to affect my audience. I hope all the hard work I put into these pictures shows!

CRAB'S EYE VIEW

As you walk down Children's Beach, a beautiful dock with blue-topped pilings in front of The White Elephant catches your eye. This dock has been the home to many boats in the summer and to many ocean viewers in the winter. As you stand on the dock, you can watch the waves roll in and out on the beach and watch the boats dock, just across the harbor. This beautiful dock is a perfect symbol of Nantucket.

A BEACON OF LIGHT

As you walk past the Congregational Church, you think of how it is an everlasting symbol of hope for the people of Nantucket. Think about the good fortune that comes to those who help. The Congregational Church takes part in many charities and helps those who need help. The sun is the symbol of a new day on the horizon, and the church truly symbolizes a beacon of light for those not only in need, but throughout our small town.

COBBLES IN TIME

All of Nantucket's cobblestones are a constant reminder of our whaling days and of the industry that brought us to where we are today. If you could just think about how old the cobblestones are, you would be in total shock. In this shot of upper Main Street, the cobblestones aren't the only part of Nantucket history in sight. Some very old buildings line the street as well as trees that are almost as old as the cobbles themselves.

OLD MOLDS, NEW BASKETS

Taking a tour of the Nantucket Lightship Basket Museum, you probably know what you are in for seeing—a whole lot of baskets. Every basket has its past, growing on a wooden mold, and every mold has a story that is woven into its baskets. On one of the shelves with some of the museum's many molds, you can see the different "wear and tear" each mold has gone through to create such a beautiful masterpiece as the lightship basket itself.
